Dear friends and ministry partners,

Reaching and transforming the Billions in China with the Bible.

If there is one thing I have learnt from my years of involvement in China ministry, it is that there is never a dull moment. The constantly changing landscape in China means that we have to keep abreast of the changes and be willing to be flexible, manage risks and pivot accordingly in order to navigate the constant changes.

In the past few years, UBS China Partnership’s ministry has evolved from Bible provisioning to increasing our focus on Bible Engagement and supporting the Churches in China by Equipping and Resourcing Pastors and Lay preachers. We feel this is strategic and has a greater extended impact. We are also working hard with our Church partners to develop materials for Scripture literacy, training and the discipleship of believers. We want to encourage Churches to help Christians read and engage with God’s Word through programs like “Walk Through the Bible”, “Trauma Healing” and conduct workshops that can impact the next generation.

We intend to support and empower the 190,000 lay preachers through equipping and resourcing them. As China continues to urbanize, we will work more closely with the Churches in big cities to develop programs to engage their congregation with the Bible. We are praising God for the opportunity to increase our level of support and partnership with the Catholic Church in China too.

For our Project Affordable Bible For China’s Millions, we will continue to provide Bible paper to keep Bibles affordable and accessible to Christians. However, we will also pivot towards getting a Bible into the hands of the 1.3 billion who do not yet know Jesus and who have never owned or read the Bible. In partnership with the Churches in China, we hope to reach these people with the new Seeker’s Bible. For the aging population, we will support the printing and distribution of large print Bibles.

We appeal for your continued support in the coming years as we enter into another phase of our ministry to serve, strengthen and support the Churches in China.

Thank you, my friends,

Daniel Loh
Co-Director (Operations), United Bible Societies China Partnership
DIRECTOR’S LETTERS

— From Bernard

Dear ministry partners and friends,

Greetings from the United Bible Societies China Partnership (UBSCP), and welcome to this issue of our Bible in China magazine!

By the grace of God, UBSCP has been serving and supporting the Churches in China on behalf of the UBS fellowship for over 30 years. We are driven by our mission to see everyone in China to have access to the Bible, the precious Word of God, in the language and medium of their choice. From the initial days when we only printed and distributed Bibles, the scope of our ministry has expanded to include Bible translation, publication, engagement, advocacy, and equipping.

Through the varied ministry that God has blessed us with, we have been encouraged to see millions of lives in China touched and transformed by the life-changing power of God’s Word. Millions of copies of whole Bibles and Scripture portions have been widely distributed to both believers and unbelievers, especially those in the rural areas. Bible-based curricula have been developed to equip believers in Christian living and service. Pastors, lay preachers and seminary students have been resourced with biblical tools to aid them in their study, teaching and preaching of God’s Word. Biblical scholars have been groomed and trained to serve Churches and seminaries. Believers in a few ethnic minority groups also now have access to the Bible which has been translated into their own languages. Through our partnership with institutes of research and higher learning in China, we have also been able to showcase the continuing relevance of the Bible to Chinese society.

All that we have done through the years would not have been possible without God’s blessing, a dedicated team, strong partnership with the Churches in China, support from the UBS fellowship, and ministry partners like you, and we hope to do even more as long as the doors of ministry remain open in China and as long as God gives us breath.

We hope you will enjoy reading the stories we have curated for you in this issue of Bible in China. Behind every story is God, the Great Master Storyteller, the Author and Finisher of our faith. He is the One who has created and crafted every story, and we believe He will do much more than we could ever imagine. And all these stories will one day culminate in the grand story, the grand vision, of Revelation 7:9-10.

After this, I looked, and behold, a great multitude that no one could number, from every nation, from all tribes and peoples and languages, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes, with palm branches in their hands, and crying out with a loud voice, “Salvation belongs to our God who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb!”

As you read where God is at work, will you join in and be part of this grand story?

Dr Bernard Low
Co-Director (Ministry), United Bible Societies China Partnership
The indigenisation and contextualisation of Christianity in China has been an area of great interest and importance to the Churches in China as well as to the country at large. As China continues to progress, how is the Christian faith to flourish in Chinese soil and take on Chinese characteristics biblically?

To explore these and related questions, the 11th International Seminar under the theme “The Bible and the Sinicization of Christianity in the New Era of China” was held on November 16-17, 2022 as a hybrid event because of COVID-19 travel restrictions.

Organised by the Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences (SASS) and its partners including the Protestant Churches in China, with the support of United Bible Societies (UBS) and the British and Foreign Bible Society (BFBS) the two-day event featured 16 distinguished speakers including academicians, researchers and church leaders from China and overseas.

A record of more than 270 faculty and students from Nanjing Union Theological Seminary, Huadong (East China) Theological Seminary, Shandong Theological Seminary and Jiangsu Theological Seminary also attended online.

Other researchers, scholars and staff from partners of SASS attended the event too, with some acting as moderators and respondents to the papers presented.
UBSCP Team Visits to China

Besides the above trips, another team from UBSCP made a two-week trip to Yunnan to visit the provincial church leaders and various places to understand the needs of the lay preachers and find out progress with our Bible translation projects for ethnic minority groups. Yet another team made a trip to Guizhou where they shared with some church leaders a new approach to Bible translation.

Bible Course for Lay Preachers

In March, over 100 lay preachers attended a Bible Equipping Course organised by the local Christian Council/TSPM with the support of the United Bible Societies. To equip the lay preachers for their ministries in the local Churches topics covering theology, Bible reading methods, and discerning heresies and cults were taught during the training. We thank God for engaging and passionate instructors, keen and eager students, and a fruitful time of learning.
A Publication Milestone for the Church in China: The CUV-Greek-ESV Triglot New Testament

by Marcus Xiao

With the support of UBS, and the collaboration of the German Bible Society, Crossway and Amity Printing Company, the China Christian Council and the National Committee of the Three-Self Patriotic Movement (CCC/TSPM) published the CUV-Greek-ESV Triglot New Testament with a launch on 26 April 2023. This Triglot New Testament allows pastors, teachers and students of the Bible to read and study the New Testament in three languages: the widely popular Chinese Union Version (CUV), Crossway's English Standard Version (ESV), and the Nestle-Aland Greek New Testament produced by the German Bible Society. This publication is set to play a crucial role in promoting and advancing biblical studies in both the Church and academia in China.

By studying the New Testament in its original language, Chinese biblical scholars and students can enrich their understanding of what the text says. This will in turn help them to “rightly divide the word of truth” (2 Tim. 2:15) to develop sound biblical theology.

On the publication of the Triglot New Testament, Rev Shan Weixiang, Vice President and General Secretary of the CCC, shared, “God's Word is like a lamp, lighting our path. God's Word is like bread, nourishing our soul. May God use this ‘Book of books’, so that those who reverently read it will gain greater understanding of His Word ... May the Scriptures they read into their lives bring forth new life.”
Bao’s Story: The Impact of the Wa Bible Translation

by Priscilla Fan and May Ang

In a remote village nestled amidst the mountains, Bao Bao'ai and his family, of the Wa ethnic minority group in China, have experienced a remarkable journey of faith.

Born into a Christian family, Bao’s spiritual path faced a turbulent interruption during the Cultural Revolution, leaving him disconnected from his faith. However, the resumption of religious activities in the 1980s, due to Deng Xiaoping’s open door and reform policy, rekindled his faith and set him on a profound quest for biblical truth.

Though his faith was rekindled, Bao encountered numerous challenges along the way. When his wife fell ill, he resorted to idol worship and superstitious rituals in search of healing. ”I offered prayers to the idols, sacrificing chickens, pigs and bulls' heads!” Bao admitted. Yet, the emptiness of these practices soon became apparent, prompting him to seek genuine meaning and transformation in his life.

The Wa minority group is an ethnic community residing in the mountainous regions of China, particularly in the border areas near Myanmar. They have a unique cultural heritage and language, which adds to their distinct identity. The Wa people have encountered numerous challenges throughout their history, including the impact of significant societal changes, such as the Cultural Revolution.
In addition, the scarcity of Wa Bibles in Bao’s village meant that it was hard for them to know God and His truths. So, when the long-awaited Wa language Bible finally arrived after more than 30 over years since the reopening of the Churches, it became a catalyst for transformation not just for Bao but also his village.

An example was Bao’s son who was once trapped in drug addiction. “The grip of addiction had plunged our family into despair, leaving us feeling neither alive nor dead.” The family not only struggled financially but also bore the weight of shame among their fellow villagers. “Even simple pleasures like enjoying a hearty meal became distant dreams and seeing other families doing so filled us with envy and longing.” Bao shared emotionally.

Now, with the introduction of the Wa Bible, a translation supported by UBS, Wa Christians began forming Bible reading groups. Bao attended first and soon brought his son to one of these groups, where his son also experienced a profound transformation through the power of God’s Word. Through the group, the Lord helped Bao’s son overcome his addiction and he repented of his sins.

The fractured relationships within their household began to heal. Bao’s daughter-in-law who was estranged from his son began to reconcile with him. She eventually also accepted Christ. Bao’s family now gathers to study Scripture together, finding strength, guidance, and renewed joy.

“We immersed ourselves in its pages, reading it day after day as a family, to the point where the Bible has become worn and weathered. As we delved deeper into its teachings, our hearts were filled with a profound sweetness. Reading the Scripture has been immensely beneficial to me personally. Previously, I did not really know God and His will. Now I know Him better, I have taken it upon myself to lead my son and daughter-in-law in this journey of studying and understanding God’s Word,” Bao shared.

Bao’s testimony showcases the remarkable impact of the Bible. He said, “The Bible has transformed my entire family and turned our lives around. It is more valuable to me than silver or gold.” The transformation in Bao’s family becomes a beacon of hope for their community, drawing others to seek the life-changing power of God’s Word. Bao not only influenced his family, he has also taught a few people how to read the Wa Bible. He will have people over at his home and read the Bible together with them.

With the arrival of the Wa Bible, not only was Bao’s family transformed, his humble village is also witnessing a revival. Bao observed that the local church is emphasising more on preaching, reading and studying the Bible, as well as encouraging the congregation to share their faith with others. It is bringing about a spiritual renewal to the Wa Christian community with gatherings for Bible study flourishing, drawing people closer to God.

United Bible Societies Engages in Cross-Cultural Dialogue with Minzu University of China

by May Ang

The Academy of Religion of Minzu University of China (MUC, 中央民族大学) held its annual Cross-Cultural Dialogue on 31 October, 2022, with the support of co-organizer, United Bible Societies (UBS).

With “Prophets in Comparative Perspective” as the theme, the online symposium invited research papers on translation, social and historical findings, comparative studies, theological interpretations, as well as cross-cultural readings to be presented. A total of eight papers were presented with a time of dialogue and discussion after every two presentations. Presenters included scholars from China’s MUC, Northwest Normal University and Shandong University, America’s Luther Seminary, Singapore’s Trinity Theological College (TTC), Finnish Bible Society and UBS. Postgraduate students and staff of the Academy of Religion of MUC, TTC, and UBS China Partnership (CP) were also in attendance.

The Rev Dr. Joshva Raja John Christopher, Head of International Bible Advocacy Centre of the British and Foreign Bible Society (BFBS), brought greetings on behalf of BFBS.

Professor You Bin, Dean of the Academy of Religion of MUC, said in his opening address that the prophetic books in the Bible contain important revelations on the “ways of God.”
Hence, the theme for this year's Dialogue was a good platform for China and overseas scholars and researchers to share their insights, and he looked forward to a fruitful time of learning.

Dr. Bernard Low, Co-Director (Ministry) of UBCP, expressed his heartfelt thanks to Professor You Bin and his team for organising and hosting the Dialogue. On the significance of this year's theme, he said, “The knowledge, insights, and original ideas that we derive from our research, writing and teaching have the potential and power to contribute positively to culture, society, and religious communities... The prophets knew the times and seasons in which they lived. They spoke words that were relevant to culture. They sought the welfare of the city.”

This year's presentations were indeed an impressive showcase of the fruitful works of esteemed academicians, scholars and researchers who have been actively engaged in the study of the Bible to explore its wisdom and continuing relevance for our day and age.

Professor You Bin gave the audience some stimulating ideas from his paper on "God's Word and 'Declarations of the Perfected and the True Ones': A Comparative Study of Prophetic Revelation in Christianity and Taoism.” Citing intercultural theology, Professor You encouraged deep learning of commonalities while also discovering certain “unique characteristics of the Christian biblical prophetic revelation through comparative study”. He suggested that these characteristics could inform the methodology of Chinese biblical studies.

The prophetic role of the prophets was also highlighted in “The Nature of Classical Prophetic Prophecy in the Eighth Century B.C.E.”, a paper co-authored by Professor Jiang Zongqi and his student Sun Wengao from the Department of Philosophy, at Northwest Normal University. Relating the Book of Amos to current affairs and the dilemmas that people face nowadays, notably on the issue of "righteousness and justice" (Amos 5:21-24), the two authors encouraged the audience to “listen to the voice of the prophet, baptised through time...”

In closing, Professor You Bin expressed his gratitude to all who participated in this year’s Dialogue, highlighting that it is important to continue exploring the relevance of the biblical texts to modern contexts.

Echoing these sentiments, Dr. Bernard Low said, “I look forward to many more future dialogues when scholars of the biblical texts, from East and West, can gather regularly to share the fruits of our research and help society appreciate the wisdom and relevance of these ancient texts.”
Wang Qiuhua: A Life Renewed

by Priscilla Fan & May Ang

Madam Wang Qiuhua, 53, did not have a personal copy of the Bible until she received one from her church with the support of United Bible Societies (UBS).

“I am very delighted to have my own copy of the Bible to read anytime and anywhere I want!” Wang shares excitedly. “God’s Word is the truth and it is alive. It gives me strength to cope with the challenges in my daily life.”

Indeed, during the Covid-19 lockdown, God’s Word was an important source of strength and comfort for Wang. Making it a habit to read the Bible everyday, she was not overly anxious or worried. Instead, she meditated on God’s Word daily and her faith was strengthened. Together with her husband, they took turns to read the Bible verse by verse. Psalm 91 spoke to her specifically. She also applied biblical truths in her daily life especially in managing difficult relationships.
“I tend to be impulsive and would often quarrel with my husband and I did not get along well with his family. After reading the Bible, I was convicted and began to seek God’s will, to have the mind of Christ (Philippians 2:5). I want to obey God’s Word,” Wang shared with conviction.

Renewed Trust in the Lord’s Guidance
Due to financial pressures, Wang once faced a dilemma whether to join her husband to work in another area away from home. But should she do so, this would have meant that nobody would care for her 86-year-old mother-in-law. In her struggle, Wang entrusted the matter unto God. “I was prepared to submit to my husband if it’s God’s will for me to join him. I trusted the Lord to lead me in this matter.” Eventually, Wang did not join her husband due to her personal health issues and she stayed home to look after her mother-in-law.

Renewed Perspective on Finances
Wang’s transformed life enabled her to embrace her sister-in-law who moved in with them. “Though our family finances are limited, I was agreeable to host my sister-in-law. I’ve come to see that in poverty or in wealth, everything is in the Lord’s hand. And because He is with us, we are able to have real peace and not worry about finances.”

Thankfully, Wang and her husband’s family are living harmoniously together and rejoicing in the Lord, though they may not be rich by the world’s standards. Indeed, the Lord helped Wang to overcome her tendency to be calculative and granted her a magnanimous heart, enabling her to have the right perspective about finances.

Renewed Love for Others
In her renewed life, Wang grew in her love for others. She recently visited a neighbor who was very sick and had spent a fortune on medical bills. Despite some unpleasant experiences in the past with the neighbour, she was not deterred. “I desire to show the love of God to others, to let them see how attractive it is. I believe this is what the Lord wants.” God’s Word inspires and empowers Wang to share the gospel of Jesus Christ in her own way.

Wang’s renewed trust in the Lord, generosity with money, and love for others was something she had not imagined she could do, but she did it as her life was being transformed by the Word.

“God is healing me physically and my strength is being renewed day by day by His Word. I am thankful for God’s presence in my life. The truth in the Bible has set me free. Thanks to the support from UBS, the gift of a personal copy of the Bible is helping me to love God’s Word and live out His Word in my life,” said Wang with sincere appreciation.
Zhang Jishun: Where Labourers Are Few

by Marcus Xiao and Zoe Zu
With a shortage of ordained ministry workers, many Churches in China have taken action to equip their lay workers with basic Biblical teachings and resources. However, many lay preachers live in rural communities where they have limited financial resources and access to Biblical tools for ministry.

One of them is lay preacher Zhang Jishun who graduated from one of these training centres and began serving in a rural church in central Yunnan. Recently, he was one of the beneficiaries of a programme where Churches equip lay preachers with Bible resources through the support of the United Bible Societies (UBS).

'It's difficult for us to access these books. We do not have the money to buy them. These books are indeed valuable and helpful.' The shy man broke into a smile as he shared a glimpse of his ministry journey.

Zhang also expressed his appreciation for the support, 'We often feel inadequate when we minister to believers, lest we lead the congregation astray [because] People like me (from the countryside) do not have much formal education and enough theological training.'

Coming from a remote rural community, Zhang who's in his late forties earns a meagre income farming the fields. He admits that there is often the temptation to give up on ministry, as the local rural church does not have enough funds to support him financially. Therefore, he faces the constant dilemma of wanting to provide a better life for his family by moving to the urban areas to look for a job.

'Yet whenever I see elderly believers in the church who have been Christians their whole lives - some of them whom I have known for many years - I am afraid that if I leave the church to work elsewhere, they will be left without anyone to shepherd them.'

So, Zhang chose to trust God to provide. And the Lord provided Zhang with the much-needed Bible tools for ministry.

‘There are limited channels for us to acquire reliable Biblical resources. Now I have trustworthy reference books and resources to minister to believers.’ Zhang expressed his gratitude to UBS for the Bible tools, as heretical teachings tend to be rampant in rural areas.

It is encouraging to see lay preachers like Zhang sacrificing the opportunity to earn more if they take on city jobs in order to answer the call for needed labourers for the Churches in rural areas. Please continue to pray for Zhang and other lay workers who have chosen to stay and serve where the needs are great.
Project Profile: Scripture Literacy

Attending School In My Father’s House

by Cynthia Oh

For most people in the developed world, a large part of their childhood is usually made up of school days. Images of time spent in the classroom, talking, laughing and gathering with other children listening to the teacher can bring back fond memories for many.

However, back in the 1960s and 70s, not everyone had a chance to go to school in China. Xue Fengqin, now 54 years old, was one of them. Her mother suffered from mental illness and this meant that the responsibilities of taking care of her younger brother and working in the fields fell on Xue’s shoulders; as such she could not go to school.

Childhood memories for Xue were filled with doing household chores like washing and cooking, care-giving, and squeezing in some rest in between for herself. Being in a classroom with other children her age was not part of those memories.

As Xue grew up, she struggled with a sense of inferiority and low self-esteem. Being illiterate, she could only take up menial jobs like cleaning and washing. It was frustrating for her when she could not read road names and menus. Imagine her fear and anxiety when she could not read current news reports during the peak of the COVID-19 pandemic.
Apart from the daily inconveniences, one of the greatest regrets for Xue was that when she became a Christian, she could not read and understand the Bible. It affected her spiritual growth as she was unable to complete reading a sentence, let alone understand the meaning behind it. She had joined a Bible reading group to learn to read God’s Word but was plagued with self-reproach. “Despite going through the chapter on my own before the session started, I still couldn’t read well so I ended up slowing down the whole group. I felt so lousy inside.”

But things changed when Xue started attending a Scripture Literacy class in the summer of 2022 organised by her church, Zhenjiang Gospel Church. She was overjoyed to be able to learn how to read and write using the Bible.

After all these years, her dream finally came true. She now has classmates around her age who are also learning together with her.

“Going to church for literacy classes is like attending school in my Father’s house. Heavenly Father is our teacher and He is teaching us how to read His Word! What incredible joy!”

Xue’s excitement is palpable. To Xue, attending literacy classes now is akin to that of a young child going back to school. “I can’t imagine I’m still given a chance to attend school. I want to learn to read and write so that I can read the Bible and share the gospel with others. I wouldn’t miss a class even if I need to take leave from my work!”

To help illiterate or semi-illiterate Chinese Christians read God’s Word, United Bible Societies (UBS) supports Scripture literacy classes run by the Churches in China. UBS support includes the free distribution of Chinese Bibles and a three-part textbook which helps believers recognise at least 1,000 Chinese characters at the end of the class.

Would you pray for the many illiterate Chinese Christians who are learning to read and write through Scripture Literacy classes, that they may continue to grow in their faith and encounter God in the Bible as they “attend school in the Father’s house”?
Churches in China and the Need for Theological Education

by May Ang

Most Chinese pastors and preachers, especially those in rural Churches, do not have the luxury of time to further their theological studies, even after many years in ministry. Yet it is necessary for them to do so. There is a desperate need for appropriate Bible training to help these leaders be able to shepherd their congregations effectively, and also nurture future leaders.

Approximately 6,000 ordained pastors and 190,000 lay preachers in China are in need of continuous theological education. In response to this need, United Bible Societies (UBS) is working in partnership with seminaries in China to conduct a series of relevant Bible-equipping courses for Church ministers in various parts of the country.

Last July, one such course was conducted in partnership with Guangdong Theological Seminary, on the subject “The Chinese Bible - From Manuscript to the Chinese Union Version,” taught by UBS Translation Consultant Dr. Simon Wong. Some participants who attended this course shared their experiences with us.
Wang Chaoying, 45, Pastor

"[During the course], I was amazed at how God oversaw the entire process of how the Bible came to be - from its writing to its transmission, from the manuscripts to translations and then to the different editions. We ought to cherish the Bible we have today as it involved the effort of many people.

During the pandemic, believers in our Church gathered online to read the Bible together and to edify and pray for one another. Psalms 23 and 29 have encouraged us to have an unwavering faith. The Word of God has been a reminder of His sovereignty in this challenging time."

Qiu Zhentai, 51, Pastor

"I would like to use what I have learned in this Bible equipping course to explain the origins of the Bible to believers and help them establish a correct view of the Bible and apply the biblical truths in their daily life.

This equipping course has also helped me personally in my pastoral role and academic research. The verse from Amos 8:11 has been a constant reminder to me to not ignore God’s Word, but to seek His wisdom and power to solve problems and face the challenges in our daily life:

“Behold, the days are coming,” declares the Lord God, “when I will send a famine on the land—not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord.”

I am determined to study God’s Word and walk the path that pleases God."

Chen Ruifen, 25, Preacher

"I would recommend this Bible equipping course to preachers and co-workers to enhance their understanding of the development, reliability and truthfulness of the Bible.

I feel that it is very important and necessary for me and my fellow preachers to participate in such training. Most of us are very busy with our daily pastoral care duties, and we could not make time to further equip ourselves in God’s Word. Being able to attend such a course helps us to increase our knowledge and obtain answers to our questions about the Bible without having to disrupt our church ministries."

Liu Hui, 36, Preacher

"After graduating from the seminary and serving as a pastor for some time, I feel that it is very necessary for us to re-learn and re-charge ourselves in God’s Word.

At present, most of us in the Churches in China use the Chinese Union Version Bible and trust in this one translation only. After attending this Bible equipping course, I hope to guide believers to understand and recognise the diversity in Bible versions and to learn to look at God’s Word more accurately.

I’m thankful for this course and I pray that God, in His own mighty power, will mobilise His people to accomplish His will abundantly and exceedingly and that Churches in China will be a blessing to the world."

Bible Day in Shanghai

How would biblical stories like Noah's Ark and biblical values like love and grace be depicted in Chinese painting? How would Chinese Christian artists portray Jesus?

Last December, Chinese Christians in Shanghai had a chance to appreciate art and engage with the Bible through the works of local Christian artists at the 2022 Bible Day event. This annual event featured an art exhibition with the theme “Draw the Scriptures” (圣经画出来)

Held on December 10-11, the event was organised by China Christian Council / Three-Self Patriotic Movement (CCC/TSPM) and Shanghai Jingling Church.

At the opening ceremony of the art exhibition on 10 December, Rev Shan Weixiang, Vice President of CCC said the objective of the Bible Day 2022 was to promote the integration of Chinese art and Christian culture and to portray biblical truth and faith through Chinese art forms. More than 50 works of art created by Christians from across China were exhibited at this event.

Partnership Manager, UBS China Partnership

How did you come to Christ?
I was born and raised in a Christian family. However, my real encounter experiencing the realness of Christ and the presence of the Holy Spirit was during my teenage years.

What's the key life transformation that you have experienced with your salvation?
I used to have low self-esteem and was timid. I was constantly afraid of people's judgment. Knowing my identity in Christ, that I'm His beloved and having an omniscient and omnipotent Father, has changed the way I interact with others.

How did the calling to serve God in this work come about?
I just felt that it was a season for me to do something meaningful with my time. And what more than to give it back to God, serving Him and doing His work. After all, I've been tremendously blessed by Him all my life that I would like to be a conduit to share His love and bless others as much as possible.

What's your favourite Bible verse?
1 Corinthians 10:13: “No temptation has overtaken you that is not common to man. God is faithful, and he will not let you be tempted beyond your ability, but with the temptation he will also provide the way of escape, that you may be able to endure it.”

What are your aspirations for your role as UBSCP Fundraisers Support?
To effectively engage and partner with funding Bible Societies to raise awareness for our key projects, and support their fundraising efforts.

What is one thing you would tell someone who wants to support the Bible mission in China?
It’s an investment that reaps an eternal return!
我深信，上帝既然在你们心里开始了这美好的工作，就必在耶稣基督再来的时候完成这工作

腓立比书 1:6

And I am sure of this, that he who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ.
